The following are specifically allowed:

- Verbal discussion of the assignment of a very general nature; examples of this include:
  - Discussion of the relative merits of competing algorithms.
  - Discussion of programming or algorithmic pitfalls to avoid.
  - Discussion of top level approach to the assignment or overall strategy for successfully completing the assignment.
- Help with aspects of the assignment not directly related to the course content; examples of this include:
  - Help with compiler or operating system problems.
  - Help with programming syntax and technique.
  - Help with printing and word processing.
  - Help with grammar, punctuation, and spelling.
  - General proof reading.
- Any help supplied by the professor or T/A.

The following are absolutely forbidden:

- Transfer of a complete lab report in any form to or from another student.
- Any electronic transfer of code or text suitable for inclusion in a lab report.
- Transfer of complete answers to any of the questions asked in the assignment.
- Transfer of a section of program code more than 10 lines in length.
- Transfer of text suitable for inclusion in a lab report more than 3 sentences in length.

On my honor, I have abided by the guidelines above, this report is substantially my own work, and I have not copied any significant part of this report from any outside source without proper attribution.

Signature ___________________________ Date __________

Name (print) ___________________________